WITH MURDER IN HIS HEART

With Murder in his Heart Robert Whittier Blows Out His Own Brains
After Attempting to Murder Ida Williams. Keeper of a House of Ill Repute, on the North End, With Whom He Was Infatuated.

An attempted murder followed by suicide occurred in the "North end" at about 12:45 a.m. Monday. The tragedy took place at the home of Ida Williams, keeper of a bagnio in that part of town.
The would-be murderer and suicide was Robert Whittier, a carpenter about 28 or 30 years of age, a man who has been in this locality at irregular intervals for the past three or four years. As a result of the tragedy, Whittier lies in a suicides grave and Mrs. Williams is confined to her bed at her home with a portion of the skull of the back of her head shot away.

The story of the attempted murder and suicide as elicited at the coroner's inquest conducted by Inspector Demers,

R.N.W.M.P., with the following jury:
J.P. Whitney, foreman, R. Unsworth, P.D.
McMillan, Wm. Drury, Fred R. Alley and Arthur Thompson, was gleaned from Mrs.
Williams and a man named Shooke, the only eye witnesses to the tragedy, although there was another man in the house at the time, was as follows:

Whittier, who first came to Whitehorse over three years ago, was much infatuated with Mrs. Williams and he, with another young man, was very attentive to her in the capacity of nurse at the time she sustained a broken leg about a year ago. In fact, he had practically made her house his home for a long time although he had a shack in the woods a few yards south of her house.

Sunday night he was at Mrs. Williams' house and, according to evidence, was offended at seeing the object of his affections attentive to other men with the result that, without any preliminaries, he attempted the woman's life and a second later took his own.

Whittier had his left arm around the woman's neck when she first discovered the revolver, a 38 caliber, owned by the woman, by the way, in his right hand. Seeing him leveling the weapon at her head she "ducked" forward and the bullet struck the back of her head, tearing away a small portion of the skull. A second later, and before Shooke could interfere, Whittier had turned the gun and had shot himself in the head, the bullet entering slightly back of the right temple and passing through the head, coming out near the left ear.

Whittier was never conscious after he shot himself but did not die until about 2:30 o'clock, or one hour and forty-five minutes afterward.

Drs. Cade and Pare, who were called in their professional capacity to examine the dying man and the wounded woman, were also witnesses before the coroner's jury. The jury brought in a verdict that the deceased came to his death by his own hand.
There was no evidence to show that Mrs.

Williams had ever encouraged Whittier's attentions any more than those of other men.

For the past several years Whittier has been employed by Eli Hume, Archie Gould and other contractors and is said to have been a good workman and a quiet, steady young fellow. He was a native of eastern Canada and Mrs. Williams testified that he had frequently told her how he was a nephew of Sir Charles Tupper.

Up to yesterday evening no arrangements had been made regarding the burial of Whittier. If no word is received by noon today the police will take charge of the body and bury it this afternoon.

AFTER THE FLOOD - Two souvenir shops here, Dawson Arts Crafts and the Klondike Gold Nugget shop, once stood side by side, close to the Yukon River, but now they are barely upright and are facing each other. The tremendous power of the river water gushing over Front Street early Thursday morning has turned them around.

DISASTER- DAWSON CITY FLOOD

The swollen Yukon River broke free of it's icy mantle and poured into Dawson City. A heavy snowfall and spring ice-jams on three rivers caused the Yukon River to pour into this historic gold rush town despite last-minute efforts by the town's residents to sand bag the river.

The water burst through the makeshift bank at midnight but fortunately most people were awake and alert so there were no lives lost. This was not the first time the gold mining settlement had been ravaged by flooding water. History shows Dawson City was flooded 22 times since 1898. Most of the floods were minor. Others were serious. Floods in 1925, 1944, 1969 and 1966 caused considerable damage.

That fateful night, a blower rounded through the streets of Dawson and drew people down to the river front to pile sand bags. At that point, former Klondike MLA Fred Berger declared it was an exercise in futility. The river then poured over the banks. Within 40 minutes of breaching the dyke, the river had flooded the town up to two metres in depth in some places.

The flood was caused by ice jams on the Yukon, Indian and Klondike Rivers. Buildings which shifted off their foundations began drifting among the chunks of ice. Silty water filled homes and turned trailers upside down. A greenhouse with a wood heater still burning inside bobbed along the flow. Historic artifacts washed away.

After the waters receded, Dawsonites recounted stories of the flood. Postmaster Lambert Curzon lost his house and most of his things that night. The Front Street building he was rented lifted, along with a log cabin, a dog house and some propane tanks. It floated a block south before coming to rest in a hollow. It was totally flooded when he found it later. "A crib board came floating out the window," he said. "Inside, the water was a foot and a half from the ceiling. I was wiped out."

Oddly enough, Curzon credits the flood with turning his life around and giving him a purpose. He sought a better job, bought some property on 7th Avenue, later sold that and built a large house at the north end of the same street. "It really gave me a boot to do something." But it made him careful too. "I've definitely stayed on high ground since then."

Parks Canada collections curator Michael Gates remembers quite clearly the events surrounding the flood. "The flood started at midnight, but during the day preceding, people were standing along the dyke watching the water come up and down with apprehension. I came to work at 9-10 p.m. and looked in the basement. Water had poured in."

The day after the flood, the Yukon government announced that 20,000 pounds of food supplies and equipment were being airlifted to the stricken town. The Emergency Measures Organization arranged for water pumps to be flown in.

Approximately 270 claims for flood damage totaling $2 million were registered. The Yukon government created a disaster assistance policy to help pay the costs of getting Dawson City back to normal.

A GRIM DEATH INDEED

Of all the accidents that can befall a person on a boat surely an explosion and fire is one of the worst. Three tons of black powder exploded on the Columbian's forward deck that fateful September day and the resulting fireball was carried the length of the ship by a downstream wind. Everyone in the immediate vicinity of the explosion would die, except for passenger Ernest Winstanley. He would be saved by his long underwear.

The Purser, Lionel Cowper had been burned over his entire body. As was the medical custom at the time of the accident, he had been wrapped in an oily blanket and given strychnine pills. In Whitehorse, when it became obvious that he was going to die, massive amounts of "opiates" were administered, but relief lasted only minutes.

WRECKAGE of the COLUMBIAN – The charred hull, which was a menace to navigation, was floated downstream a short way and abandoned in "Columbia" slough.
