CITY RESIDENT MAKES POLAR HISTORY

Whitehorse resident Martyn Williams has become the first Canadian to reach both poles of the earth using only skis and a small dog team.

Williams, 44 and his three companions on the International north Pole Expedition were picked up Saturday after six grueling weeks of fighting severe temperatures, driving winds, and tough, unpredictable sea ice.

All four members of the group are South Pole veterans. Australian Mike McDowell 44, accompanied Williams to the South Pole in 1990. Norwegian brothers Sjur, 27, and Simen Modre, 29, traveled to the South Pole in 1991.

The group is now resting at the advance base on Ellesmere Island before they return tonight to Resolute Bay, N.W.T.

Tough terrain slowed progress for the first few weeks. However, the expedition traveled more than 25 kilometres a day in the last couple of weeks to make up for last time.

They had to reach the pole by May 12. After that date, warming temperatures cause fog and broken ice, which makes air pick-up impossible.

The trip has been much tougher than expected, Pangman said. Temperatures have averaged about -35° and driving winds have caused frostbite. A team of eight dogs has been more of a hindrance than a help. Pangman said.

SUPER-ROBIN ZIPS 900 MILES IN SEVEN-HOUR MIGRATION

Rupert the Robin's winter migration came late - but it sure was fast.

It took Rupert only about seven hours Friday to fly 925 miles from Whitehorse to Vancouver. And he didn't have to move a feather.

Rupert came the easy way - on a mercy flight that saved him from almost certain death by starvation or freezing.

Whitehorse car dealer Bill Drury first spotted Rupert Nov. 10 munching berries on the mountain ash in front of his living room window.

As the days went by Drury and his wife grew concerned that Rupert didn't fly south to join his fellow robins who had left a month earlier.

On Thursday they decided Rupert needed some assistance.

"It was 17 below zero, the coldest day yet, and the winds were strong, 25 miles an hour," said Drury. "I don't think the poor little thing would have lasted another day."

He snared Rupert in his hat, thawed him out in the house and fed him snow from a teaspoon and cranberries impaled on broom straws.

A wildlife expert told him that the bird would have little chance of surviving the Yukon winter, so Drury decided to arrange Rupert's migration for him.

He got co-operation from Whitehorse Star publisher Bob Erlam and Canadian Pacific Airlines, and Rupert was booked onto flight 22 Friday afternoon with a supply of cranberries from Drury's deep-freeze.

"When I saw him off he was as fit as blueberry pie. Better make that mountain ash berry pie," said Drury.

Rupert was pampered by the stewardesses on the flight and met at Vancouver International Airport by Bill Bell chief inspector for the SPCA.

He spent the night at Bell's home.

"He's pretty perky," Bell said today. "I got him some mountain ash berries from a bush up the street."

He said he planned to release Rupert in Stanley Park later on in the day.

Rupert should feel at home there.

"We have lots of mountain ash bushes," said Stanley Park zoo curator Alan Best. "And they're loaded with berries this year."

TAKE GOOD CARE OF HIM: says Bill Drury as he turns Rupert the Robin over to CPA stewardesses Autumn Bell and Virginia Marshall Friday afternoon at the Whitehorse airport. The half-frozen bird had been existing on frozen berries from the mountain ash tree in the Drury's yard in sub-zero temperatures, until the local businessmen decided he should be given an assault on his delayed flight south. CPA took it from there and SPCA Inspector Bill Bell met Rupert at Vancouver Friday night. He was given special care all the way and released Saturday in Stanley Park. With him went a supply of Yukon low bush cranberries in case he runs out of mountain ash!

1962 News from the Whitehorse Star

Wolves Attack Horses

Wolves, within a few miles of Whitehorse, caused the death of one horse and severely injured a second during the weekend. The two animals belonging to Douglas Lowe of 609 Alexander were pursued and bitten about the hindquarters at the northwest end of Marsh Lake.

Mr. Lowe found the wounded animals still on their feet but one was so badly injured he had to shoot it. The horses were part of the plans to use next season as a big game guide and outfitter.

He said he did not know how many wolves were involved but found many tracks in the vicinity adding that, "even one wolf can make plenty of tracks."

Whitehorse West Councillor Bert Boyd gave the okay to Game Director J.B. Fitzgerald to put poison bait out on the ice in an effort to stop the mauraders. This approval is necessary within 75 miles of settled areas under the recently-amended game ordinance. Outside this radius the game director has full authority with regard to poison bait. Today Mr. Fitzgerald commented his department was carrying out a poison program within the limits of its financial ability.

Game outfitters and guides see this year as a bad one for game in the Yukon bush. With the snow building a firm crust on which the wolves can travel but the game cannot, moose, caribou, elk and deer are easy prey for the carnivores.

Reports from the Peel River area indicate that the pickings are so good for wolves they are killing caribou and leaving them which is a virtually unheard of occurrence.

Wolves over the NWT border were said to be preying on herds with ease this year. One report told of a thousand animal herd literally hemmed in by wolves in the Nahanni country.

YUKON'S GREAT SHOWING

Yukon Territory's contribution to the Empire and Allied cause in this war is nothing short of magnificent.

Despite the fact the region is remote and the people are engaged in struggling against primitive and exceptionally obdurate and severe conditions in pioneering, they have more than held their own in the war game.

Between four and five hundred men have gone from this territory direct to the war, meaning practically ten per cent of the population of Yukon are under arms in Europe. Were the whole of the Dominion, with its eight million people, to contribute in like proportion to Yukon there would be 800,000 men, or just twice as many enlisted from Canada today as there are. ...

The generous and patriotic spirit of Yukon deserves to be known throughout the Empire and Allied realm. If all the Empire were contributing in like proportion in men and money the assembled wealth and armies today would be far greater than they are. But these matters will adjust themselves.

Yukoners will continue to do a mighty share and uphold the tradition that the sons and daughters of the North are excelled by none in loyalty to the nation and to humanity.

1932 - Albert Johnson, The Mad Trapper of Rat River

THE MAD TRAPPER OF RAT RIVER

The place is Aklavik, a tiny village in the Mackenzie River Delta in the northwest corner of Canada's Northwest Territories and the man called himself Albert Johnson. He was dubbed "the mad trapper of Rat River" and was the fugitive in the most bizarre and dramatic manhunt in Canada's history.

To this day, little light has been shed on the real identity of the strange man who was finally gunned down in the mid-winter snows in Eagle River, Yukon on February 17, 1932.

In the sparsely populated river valleys of Canada's Arctic, this was strange and unseemly behavior where friendly and social interchange was the basic fabric of life. The cold-eyed stranger's surly silence in this already silent and lonely land made people uneasy.

A Mountie was obliged to question Johnson as a result of a formal complaint lodged against him by two Loucheux trappers. It was ascertained that Johnson refused to acknowledge or say a single word when the Mountie visited his lonely cabin on Rat River.

When the same officer returned with a search warrant several days later, Johnson, still without saying a word, shot and seriously wounded the constable.

On the third occasion, a heavily armed posse laid siege to his cabin for three days. They even used dynamite to blow the roof off and dislodge the trapper from his cabin but to no avail. He fired round for round and for the third time forced his attackers to retire for further supplies and to plan a subsequent assault.

Radio reports of the confrontation between the taciturn trapper and the famed mounted police force of Canada's Arctic had reached the outside world and had fired up the interest of North Americans. It has been stated that the daily reports of the chase and periodic shoot-outs hastened the public acceptance of radio as a medium for blow-by-blow news coverage.

When a larger and better equipped posse was again ready to confront Johnson, it was learned he had abandoned his damaged cabin at Rat River. He had disappeared on foot into the frigid white world of the vast Mackenzie River Valley.

The wilderness trained Mounties, the Loucheux and white trappers live by sight, sound and a sixth sense, they interpret what they see and hear. Even the seemingly indefatigable and super-elusive Albert Johnson must leave tracks in the winter snows. A week passed before the Mounties found a faint trace of the trapper's trail and resumed pursuit.

He was found, a gun battle ensued and a Mountie was shot dead by Johnson. He then scaled an ice covered canyon wall and disappeared once more into the twilight of the Arctic wilderness.

It was around this time that the famed pioneer bush pilot, Wop May, joined the manhunt with his ski equipped aircraft. The aircraft not only ferried supplies to the pursuit parties, but was instrumental in spotting the fugitive's trail from the air.

Johnson, meanwhile, had somehow managed to cross the forbidding Richardson Mountain Range using a caribou herd and a blizzard to obliterate his trail. It was a fantastic feat for a man travelling alone and on foot and the crowning proof of the man's amazing stamina and endurance.

In spite of the odds against him, it was almost by accident that he was encountered, surrounded and eventually shot to death on the Eagle River, 40 days after the initial confrontation on the Rat River. Defiant to the last, he seriously wounded yet another Mountie before he died.

Although called upon to surrender a score of times by the law officers, Johnson was never heard to utter a single word during the almost seven weeks of siege, pursuit and battle. Who was he really? ...and where did he come from?

He was a silent man, in a lonely land.

The rifles and snowshoes of the "mad trapper of Rat River" remain on display at the RCMP Museum in Regina, Saskatchewan.
