MOOSE CALF 'ADOPTS' MAN AS ITS MOTHER'

Curt Mintz huddled in the bush with his two dogs for 20 minutes waiting for the cow moose to attack.

"There's no way you can come between a cow and a calf and live," Mintz said in an interview Monday. "I'd rather meet a grizzly."

But there was no attack.

Instead, Mintz became the adopted mother to a three-day-old female moose calf that now lives at the Yukon Game Farm on the Takhini Hot Springs Road.

Mintz came upon the moose on June 2 while strolling through the woods about four kilometres from his cabin on the Alaska Highway near Whitehorse.

"I heard it first, and I thought it was a bear, so I just dived down and grabbed the two dogs and held them.

"I knew whatever it was didn't hear me, 'cause it was making too much noise.

"When I saw it was calf sitting there, I was more worried. I thought, 'I came between a cow and a calf, I'm in really big trouble,' I stayed down there for about 20 minutes.

"I circled around the thing and saw it was a calf moose. So then I snuck up on it and within 10 feet, it heard me. It started crying just like a little baby."

That's when he realized it was alone.

The calf was probably a twin and left behind by its mother, Mintz said. If the mother had been shot, he said, the calf would have stayed with the mother and the hunters would have gotten it.

"It wouldn't have lasted overnight. There's no doubt about it. It's like Grand Central Station out there for coyotes."

He stroked the calf, grabbed it, put it on his shoulders and marched four kilometres back to his cabin with it.

"After about maybe an hour or two, it figured I was its mother. If I walked away from it, it would start crying."

The calf wasn't afraid of people, he said. It liked his dogs, his friend's cat, and gave his guests big moose-lip kisses.

It would cry to eat, lay down, and go outside because it wanted Mintz to be closer to it.

It was three days old, so it couldn't follow him far. It would walk for a while, then stop and cry when Mintz continued.

"I entertained thoughts at one point in time of keeping it," Mintz said. But he decided it would be better for the moose if it went to the game farm. Danny Nowlan, owner of the Yukon Game Farm, is an old friend of Mintz's father.

Nowlan has had a bull moose for about 10 years, said Mintz, and he hasn't be able to find a cow.

So, this could be the beginning of a Yukon moose family bred in captivity.

1898 THE DALTON TRAIL

305 Miles from tidewater to the river
By William D. MacBride

Visitors to the Yukon and Alaska are always interested in the history of the areas through which they travel. One of these is the route traversed by the Haines Highway, which follows to some extent "The Dalton Trail" of gold rush days 159 miles from tidewater at Haines, Alaska, to Haines Junction. Mile 1016 on the Alaska Highway in Yukon Territory.

From the Archives of the Alaska Historical Library and Museum at Juneau, the Northwest Mounted Police, and photo albums and documents of Henry Dow Banks of Springfield, Mass. on a journey over the Dalton Trail in 1898, a brief history of Jack Dalton and his famous trail...

1902 News from the Whitehorse Star

New Kind of Hydraulic

From the Yukon (Dawson) Sun 12th inst: Several sleigh loads of machinery are expected from the outside today, which may be the initiatory step toward the revolutionizing of the mining industry of the north. The consignment is for the N.A.T.&T. Co., and consists of an experimental plant called the Adams hydraulic lift. It will be installed at once at No. 63 below on Bonanza, under the personal supervision of J.H. Adams, its inventor.

The plant was built in San Francisco especially for the Klondike test. The plan of operation is different from the ordinary hydraulic work, and as the name implies it is in the nature of a lift, whereby gravel can be raised into a sluice box from a point many-feet below. Its principle is similar to a centrifugal pump. The apparatus contains two main pipes, one of which by gravity plays on the bed of gravel and forces it upward through another pipe into a sluice box. Mr. Adams in an interview, said:

"The introduction of the invention is merely an experiment, and much difficulty is apprehended in bringing it to a successful basis of operation. The objectionable features in the north are many.

"In the first place where we intend to experiment the lay of the ground prohibits a bedrock flume to carry away the residue from the works. Again, where heretofore the gravity system has been employed the water must be pumped on Bonanza.

"The plants are now successfully operating in all parts of the world. I have opened up propositions in South Africa, South America, Mexico and Korea. In every case the ground has been handled economically and with great profit to the owners.

"If the results from the Bonanza efforts are all that are anticipated, an order for a number of mammoth plants will at once be given, which will be operated in various parts of the Yukon.

"The beneficial results that will, under these circumstances, accrue to the mining industry of the country cannot be estimated. Ground that is now considered absolutely worthless will pay big returns. To the owners of ground that is fairly rich it will men increased profits.

"The general production of the country would be greatly increased in the saving of many millions of dollars which now go to waste by the present system of mining.

"The N.A.T.&T. Co., realizes the vast benefits to be derived if the idea is successful, and on this basis is willing to spend considerable money and time to demonstrate the feasibility of the new invention."

BOBBY KENNEDY CLIMBS MT. KENNEDY

Mountain and mountain climbing stories in The STAR have always received prominent coverage. One of the interesting climbs was made by the late U.S. Senator Robert Kennedy in March 1965 when he climbed the Canadian mountain named for his brother President John F. Kennedy.

The mountain, 145 miles northwest of Whitehorse, forms a triangle with Mount Alverstone and Mount Hubbard and until that time was the highest (13,905 ft.) unclimbed peak in the St. Elias mountains.

When the mountain was named for the late President, the National Geographic Society and the Boston Museum of Science decided to conduct a joint survey which would result in a completely detailed map. Bobby Kennedy, though he had never climbed before, joined the party at the last minute and thus the world press became very interested. Newsmen descended on the Yukon in droves but the Whitehorse Star had the first published pictures of the event.

Veteran Everest climber Jim Whittaker of Seattle led the three man party of Kennedy and Barry Prather up the last ridge where they unroped and let the Senator ascend the last 50 yards alone to be the first man on top. It was not a particularly tough climb, as climbs go, but it was a personal pilgrimage for Kennedy, who planted the Kennedy family crest, Canadian flags and National Geographic emblem on the top.

Kennedy Mountain, at the lower camps, was crawling with other members of the climb, military men and helicopters, private planes rented by the media, the ice field research people and anyone else who could scrounge a ride.

A National Film Board crew guided by Whitehorse mountaineer Monty Alford, recorded the climb and Yukoners Bob Erlam, Alex Van Bibber and Wayne MacDonald took pictures which appeared in Life, Time and The Whitehorse Star. The latter three, incidentally, were also present when Kennedy came down that night from the ascent. They fed him steak, instant mashed potatoes, ice cream and the heel of a bottle of Madeira wine which someone (probably Bob) had stashed in a pack sack.

Back in Whitehorse, Kennedy dropped in to the Capital Hotel to get cleaned up and have a drink with the locals. He bought a round and paid for it with a cheque which owner Cal Miller kept and had framed. Said Cal, "I told him I wanted to keep it as a souvenir of the next President of the United States."
