Headlines in History

"SQUATTERS TO GO NEXT WEEK!"

1964 Whitehorse Star
Cleaning up Whiskey Flats

NOW. Rotary Park features a children's playground and lots of nice green grass to relax on. Whitehorse STAR photo.

THEN. Whisky Flats was old cars and old shacks surrounded by junk. Whitehorse STAR photo.

Lest anyone should bristle and get ready to do battle, let it be pointed out that the headline appeared in the early 1950's and it referred to Whiskey Flats, now known by the less colourful title of Rotary Park. But even with the announcement in headlines it was still ten years before Whisky Flats was cleaned up.

The flats, a legacy of the wartime boom years, was a conglomeration of bits and pieces of old American army buildings, tar paper shacks and log structures with oil drums and wrecked cars drawn around them. Situated along the river bank, there were actually three "flats" – used largely by transients who hauled their slops out to the river and their water back. Whiskey Flats in the south end of town, Sleepy Hollow in the north and Moccasin Flats in the middle.

There was minor crime and the odd murder but on the whole Whisky Flats, outside of the boozing, was a fairly quiet place and it had a number of solid citizens who claimed they couldn't find anywhere else to live. They paid no taxes and they were on White Pass or crown property.

Whitehorse city fathers tried for years to coax the squatters to leave. They made deals with the territorial and federal governments for land in the outskirts of town for squatters to move to. But no sooner would one squatter move out than another would move in. This process of moving squatters did start the out of town developments of Porter Creek and other "ribbon development" areas to bloom, but Whiskey Flats continued.

Then came the building of the first Robert Campbell bridge and the opening of the sub-division of Riverdale. All those 9 to 5 commuters driving to and from downtown Whitehorse didn't like the view from the bridge, so the pressure was on. But it wasn't until 1964 that the big cleanup took place. That year, the Chamber of Commerce headed by businessman Erik Wieneke, along with companies and private citizens, volunteered their labour and equipment and day after day hauled thousands of tons of junk and buildings away.

THE KLONDIKE HOCKEY TEAM
at Dey's Rink in Ottawa, January 14, 1905.

A CONSIGNMENT OF HOCKEY JUNK

It's not often a local hockey team has a chance to vie for the Stanley Cup, but it happened one time in Yukon history and the results of the contest make it probable that it will never happen again.

Hockey was big in the Klondike in 1904, and the competition so fierce that local promoters of the sport were looking for bigger and greater challenges. With the typical Yukon "if you're going to go for it, you might as well go for the top" attitude, Dawson organizers wrote to Ottawa challenging the World Champions to a Stanley Cup duel. The challenge was accepted.

The Klondike team sallied forth from Dawson to do battle with the Ottawa Invincibles, also known as "The Silver Seven."

Ottawa Hockey Team Won First Game of Series by Score of 9-2. The Dawson Hockey team went down in overwhelming defeat before the Ottawa Invincibles by a score of 23-2 in the second.
